B. H. HILL ON TANNERS, SHOEMAKERS AND OWNERS OF FACTORIES.

But there are many persons who are not officers, agents, or employees of the government, yet who are doing much to oppress the people and enrich themselves by treble prices. Such as shoe-makers, tanners, superintendents, and owners of factories and manufacturers and artisans of all kinds.
All such men are not only practical enemies to our success in this struggle, but are acting in direct conflict with the government, and are subject to punishment. But this exemption is not for the benefit of individuals, but for the public good. All thus situated, therefore, who act for their individual gain, violate the true intent of the law, and are expressly subject to be at once arrested and never more to be exempted! The law provides that seventy-five percent, "of the cost of production shall be the extreme limit of the price charged." Various pretenses and schemes are being already resorted to to magnify apparently the cost of production, or to misify the calculation in the minds of the people. Under this law neither the cost of living, nor the interest on capital invested, form any part of the cost of production. These are provided for in the seventy-five percent, profit allowed, and the provision is ample and sufficient—more really ought to have been allowed.

What is the cost of production on a pair of shoes?
It is the price paid for the raw hide—the expense of tanning it—and the hire of the operative who makes the shoes. Let it be remembered that the hides which are tanning, and which are to make the shoes for the ensuing winter, were bought at comparatively low prices. The present prices of hides and leather constitute a part of the cost of the production of shoes made from hides or leather products. Now have tanners the right to charge present prices for the leather made of hides bought at lower prices heretofore.

What is the cost of production of a yard of cotton goods? It is the cost of the cotton and the actual expenses incurred in running the looms (not putting up) the machinery. Let it be remembered that much of the cloth now being made, and which will be of the cloth now being made, is manufactured of cotton bought at low prices. The present price of cotton is no part of the cost of producing a yard of cloth from cotton bought during the winter and spring now past.

Every operative has a personal interest in seeing to it that this law is not violated. For if one superintendent or officer of a factory or other establishment shall violate this law, every person engaged about the establishment is subject to conscription at once and without remedy!

So every man, woman and child in the land is interested in reporting violations of this law, for it is to prevent them from being oppressed as well as to prevent the government from being weakened that the law has been enacted. Terms made known on day of sale.
